With a full quart of whiskey in his hand, Jim Jackson (colored) rushed into the First Police Station last night yelling for protection. Sergeant Sapparad, who was on duty, grabbed him as he ran before the rail.

While the negro was telling his tale, Frank Pecchi appeared and said that the quart of whiskey was his, and that Jackson had sneaked away with the last that he asked for a quart of liquor which was wrapped up and handed him apparently as a free gift.

Pecchi, the bar tender, denied that arg.

HABITS OF FLAMINGO ARE FULLY DESCRIBED

Thomas Lecturer at Richmond College Gives Account of Study of Habits of Little Known Bird---Thanksgiving Services To-Day.

Bird---Thanksgiving Services To-Day.

The concluding lecture of the present series of Thomas lectures was given by Frank Chapman in the chapel of Richmond College last night. The subject was "Island Bird Life," with particular reference to the nesting habits of the flamingo. Until Mr. Chapman's most successful work very little was known of the flamingo. Recent books have erroneously shown the bird was known of the flamingo. Recent stake is similar to that which was made when the bird of paradise was named. Skins of the birds were brought to England by the navigator Magellan, but that bird did not have any legs, and hence was supposed to live in the heavens. As a matter of fact, the bird does have very small legs, little suited for walking, and it does spend the great part of its time in the air, often apparently "scated on the air," so easily does the bird apparently maintain its postilon. Remarkable sildes showed to the audlence the wonderful skill of flamingoes in a validion, a bird even scratching its ear while thus poised in the all validing the shells from the mud, they dance up and down in the rud, they dance up and down in the mud, they dance up and down in the mud, they dance up and down in the mud, they dance up and down in the sells from the mud, they dance up and down in a very undignified rash-man proved that this habit is instincted the sheal of the mud down in a very undignified rash-man proved that this habit is instincted the pan of milk they began dancing up and down in a very undignified rash-man proved that this habit we be array ancein man proved that this habit when the mud down
